Forecast for Saturday 05 Dec 2020

Weather: Snow showers, falling increasingly as rain below about 450m, slowly dying out overnight with clear spells developing. Then a mainly dry morning with some good spells of sunshine. Increasing cloud in the afternoon will bring a few snow showers to eastern fells from mid-afternoon. The showers developing more widely in the evening with perhaps some more persistent snow in the east towards midnight, with rain becoming more likely below about 600m.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: Close to 100% in the morning, and in the west through much of the day. Chances in the east fall to around 60% in the afternoon with occasional cloud above 600m edging east. Chances fall further through the evening.

Visibility: Very good with some decent views of recently snow covered surrounding fells, falling to just 1 or 2 kilometres in snow showers.
